

Abstract

A computer networking system, method and device for demultiplexing a series of HTTP requests and multiplexing HTTP responses. The method may include receiving a series of HTTP requests from a single client and routing those requests to a plurality of sockets on a server. The method may also include receiving HTTP responses from the plurality of sockets on the server and routing those responses to a single client.